Davindar Mahil – Madera, CA

Davindar Mahil is a diversified business owner and fourth-generation California farmer based in Madera, California. His family's farming legacy began in 1910 when his great-grandfather immigrated from Punjab, India, establishing more than a century of agricultural production in the Central Valley. Davindar owns and manages several business entities, including Creekside Farming Company Inc., which farms almonds, winegrapes, walnuts, pistachios, and mandarins across three counties in California.

Davindar holds a Bachelor's degree in Agricultural Business from California State University, Fresno. He previously served as Vice Chair of the California Association of Winegrape Growers and was recently re-elected to its Board of Directors, where he continues to support and advocate for California's grape-growing industry. Davindar lives in Madera with his wife, Naginder, and their two children, and enjoys golfing and international travel with his family.
